OPEN RESEARCH ROUNDTABLES:
WE WOULD LIKE TO HEAR FROM YOU!

We would like to invite key researchers from University of BORDEAUX to a round table.

The goal is to create an exchange between your researchers and our editors. Beyond sharing our approach to open research, we want first and foremost to listen to the researchers themselves.

What are the difficulties they encounter when publishing? How can we support them more effectively in their area of excellence? What do they think of the development of open research in France?

We are particularly interested in learning directly from your research communities how they select the journals to publish in, how they work with repositories, what they think about research evaluation.

Do they have difficulty dealing with predatory publishers? And finally, understand what role do they want a publisher like Springer Nature to play in the open research environment.

We would also take the opportunity to understand common misconceptions on Open Access and how Open Research practices are implemented at your institution.

We are also planning to have a relevant Editor present with us who will answer subject specific questions.

We plan this round table to last around two hours, to allow all participants to engage and exchange in a meaningful way. We will have a translator available so that we can exchange in French and/or English accordingly.
